Call for Papers

We are always soliciting contributions for future issues of this journal. If you have recently completed a thesis, worked on an interesting mathematical project, participated in the Student-Faculty Seminar, given a talk in the Undergraduate Colloquium, or would like to share your internship experience, please consider writing an article for this journal.

To submit an article, please forward your material in electronic form (Microsoft Word or LaTeX) to any of the above faculty editors. Their e-mail addresses are listed at the department's homepage www.bsu.edu/math.

Articles should not exceed 6 pages in length and thesis abstracts should be limited to 2 pages. Review and selection of articles is handled by the editorial committee. Editorial changes of accepted articles are communicated through students' advisors.
