

HONR 296 Final Project

Down:

1. Terminating a counseling relationship after a client has reached their goals
3. Taking into consideration the client, their goals (strategy), and the consequences of each potential solution when creating a treatment plan
4. Depression and poor self-image/efficacy have become major side effects of this computer application
5. A case worker who helps their client budget, plan for, and explain the next steps needed to reach their goal
9. Utilizing apps and programs that assist in meditation practice as a tool for clients to use outside of the counseling setting

Across:

2. A client's poor environment and lack of resources and a proper support system
6. Building and maintaining relationships with fellow social workers and counselors to gain new resources
7. A client's reason for seeking social services
8. Following a particular theoretical orientation's steps to evaluate and solve a client's issues
10. The specific treatment plan and/or plan of action created by a social worker for a client
11. When a theoretical orientation is developed based on the data of a specific group of people and is successful, but fails when working with a more generalized population
